

S. orbicularis ; folio subrotundo-ovato emarginato caule breviorè, floribus fasciculatis, sepalis lineari-oblongis glabris inferiore bipartito, petalis ellipticis acutis serratis, labello ovato rostrato basi concavo apice ciliato obtuso, columnâ apice serratâ.

A small plant, resembling the preceding in habit, but with both the leaves and flowers more purple. It was imported by Messrs. Loddiges from Demerara. Both these have the loose sheaths on the stem, such as are characteristic of Lepanthes, but neither of them offers the slightest transition to that curious genus.
